

Sundress Publications and Agape Editions To Become Sister Presses

Los Angeles, CA—We are pleased to announce that Agape Editions, currently an imprint of Sundress Publications, is applying for 501(c)3 status, and upon approval, will become a separate publishing house.

Since its inception two years ago, Agape Editions has evolved into an individual presence with its own dedicated staff, programming, and mission. We, at Sundress and Agape, collectively felt that a distinct identity in the publishing world would allow us even more room to grow and flourish, and are pleased to be moving forward while preserving our special relationship with Sundress. We look forward to working as sister presses, a relationship that only widens our capacities and network, and are excited to run future programs, workshops, and community-focused initiatives together in partnership.

A 501(c)3 non-profit literary press collective founded in 2000, Sundress Publications is entirely volunteer-run, publishes chapbooks and full-length works in both print and digital formats, and hosts a variety of online journals. Agape Editions publishes literary work by authors of vision. They seek to publish books that enact, embrace, or otherwise engage with some aspect(s) of the mystical, the ecstatic, or the Numinous.
